Farmers talk funny
Milk base, loating barns, B.C.I.A., S.L.B., bulk curing, feed conversion ratios. Terms commonly used by farmers sound very strange to someone who doesn't know farming or farmers.
Here at Fidelity we have agricultural people who know what farming means to us and the community. They work at agricultural financing every day, all year long. They are highly trained and keep abreast of market trends, new management methods and legislation that affects farming.
But what sets them apart is the way they "feel" about farming. They take into consideration assets men have that can't be computed. Assets like character, integrity and the willingness to tackle the tough job.
This feeling has been translated into a a policy that goes like this: "Helping you grow helps us grow.
If you have a financial need related to farming, call us. We talk funny too!

October Rescue Month

Honored By Eye Bank

Richmond, Va. -- The Virginia State Police and the Richmond City Police were Honored at the recent annual meeting of the Board of Directors of Old Dominion Eye Bank, held at the Downtown Club here.

Certificates of Distinguished Service to the Blind were accepted for those two organizations by Col. H. W. Burgess, Superintendent of the Virginia State Police and by Col. Frank S. Duling, Chief of Police of the City of Richmond.

In making the presentations, L. Paul Byrne, Chairman of the eye bank's Board, noted that the voluntary co-operation of police officers, in helping to speed human eye tissue to its destination, has often been the key factor in making possible the use of that tissue for transplant purposes within the time limits which nature imposes. Corneal eye tissue, taken from the eyes of a deceased donor, must be transplanted within forty-eight hours in order to insure best possible chance of a successful transplant.

Old Dominion Eye Bank, which is completely supported by the Lions Clubs of Virginia, regularly receives the co-operation of individual Lions Clubs members, as well as the police, in expediting the transportation of eye tissue.

"Because the available supply of human eye tissue cannot possibly meet existing needs, Byrne said, "our police officers are directly responsible for the restored eyesight of many formerly blind Virginians."

Compensation And Pension

Two key words for veterans and dependents, "compensation" and "pension" are often used interchangeably, but their official meanings are vastly different.

Compensation, the Veterans Administration explains, is paid because of a disability or death that resulted from military service.

Pension, on the other hand, is paid on the basis of need to wartime veterans or their dependent survivors when the veteran is totally and permanently disabled from causes not traceable to military service, or when he dies of such causes.

Payments for compensation may go to a veteran, if he has been disabled by an injury or a disease that originated or was aggravated while he was in active military service. When death results from military service or from a service connected disability after service compensation payments go to the veteran's unremarried widow or dependents. Income from other sources is not considered. Payments for pension may be made to eligible veterans or surviving dependents whose incomes fall below levels set by law. The amount of the pension varies with the recipient's income from other sources.
